

Kevin Chen

Teacher

Hello, I am Kevin Chen, a current Earth Science student at San Jose State University, and an Innovation Lab, Math, and Public Speaking teacher at Genius Academy. My hobbies include reading and watching a variety of documentaries. I also have a pet corgi named Berry.

I began my interest in teaching in university when I was taking various biology classes. Since the subject interested me, I became top of the class, and other people came to me for help. I eventually formed a study group and began tutoring people who were struggling. As I taught them, I felt extremely rewarded by the progress others were making with my help.

One of my main interests in the sciences involves climate change such as understanding what is happening, what will happen, and what we can do about it. I strongly believe that a more prosperous future can only be brought about by a future generation that is observant, caring, and knowledgeable about the unfolding events of the present and future.

I look forward to meeting with you and helping your child with their academic skills and expand their knowledge.