Teacher

Hello, my name is Cindy. I teach math at Genius Academy. I graduated with a master's degree in Statistics from University of New Hampshire in 2017. I had been working as a teaching assistant for two years, tutoring undergraduate students with Calculus, Finite Math and Experiment Design. After graduation, I joined a biology research program and contributed to the data analysis of large scale genomic data before transitioned to a full-time mom three years ago.

I have always fostered an intense passion toward Mathematics since childhood, and solving math problems gave me a real sense of achievement. Since tutoring math to my daughter in the last five years, I had not only gained the opportunities to try various math problems but also learned which math concepts kids like her are often frustrated with and developed effective teaching strategies to help her.

I believe my experiences make me to be better prepared to help more students who have trouble with math. I am excited to work with you and your kids to make math fun!
